Foreword

For five successive years the Senior Class of the Fairmont Normal School has published an annual, "The Mound." In accordance with this custom the Class of Nineteen Hundred Thirteen offers to the public this—the sixth edition.

In preparing this Mound we have tried in every way to make it truly representative of the school spirit and the various phases of school life. We trust that we have omitted none of the better features of previous volumes. No doubt the present one has many imperfections, but it is our hope that each succeeding edition may be better than this—the Mound of 1913.

Dedication

The Class of Nineteen Hundred Thirteen,

of the

Fairmont State Normal School,

respectfully dedicates

this book to

Hon. Stuart F. Reed

HON. STUART F. REED

Hon. Stuart F. Reed

MR. REED, son of Major Milton D. Reed, was born on a farm in Barbour County, West Virginia. He graduated at the Fairmont State Normal School in "Cameron" Class (1885), and then attended West Virginia University, where he received the degree of LL. D. (1889). Salem College honored him with the degree of Ph. D. (1911). He was one of the founders of The Athenaeum at the University, and member of its first staff of editors. For eight years he was managing editor of The Clarksburg Telegram.

Mr. Reed has given a full measure of his time and energy to the institutions of his State. He has served as regent of the University; was President West Virginia Electoral Association; member of the State Senate; Eminent Commander Knights Templars; Postmaster of Clarksburg; President of the Board of Trustees of Broadus Institute; Member World's Press Congress, Chicago, 1893; elected Secretary of the State of West Virginia in 1908 and again in 1912.

He is Vice-Chairman of the West Virginia Semi-Centennial Commission, and is actively engaged in advertising to the world at large the resources and advantages of his native State.

He was married to Miss Bonnie Bell Smith, of Clarksburg, June 16, 1898. Mrs. Reed is a graduate of Broadus, a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and was first Worthy Matron of the Charleston Eastern Star. She is one of the most popular ladies of the State administration at the Capital, and is prominent in the social, institutional and religious activities of the city and State. Mr. and Mrs. Reed are members of the Baptist Church, and in fraternal societies Mr. Reed is affiliated with the Masons, Shriners, Elks and Modern Woodmen.

Mr. Reed is interested in educational progress and has done much to promote the general education of the State. As an alumnus of the Fairmont State Normal School he is, and has ever been, a warm friend of the Institution.

NORMAL SCHOOL BUILDING

History of The Fairmont Normal School

By MRS. N. R. C. MORROW

[It is impossible in space so limited as that afforded by The Mound to give more than a mere outline of the history of the Fairmont Normal School, and much therefore that would be vitally interesting must necessarily be omitted.]

The early history of the school is given somewhat more in detail since that is less familiar to the great majority of the alumni than the more recent history, and therefore of greatest interest. For the information pertaining to those early years, the writer acknowledges her indebtedness to the Hon. B. L. Butcher, who almost from its beginning has been more or less closely identified with the school.—N. R. C. M.]

THE Legislature of West Virginia, by Chapter 120 of the Acts of 1867, provided for the State Normal School at Marshall College, Huntington, and created a Board of Regents.

Dr. William R. White, of Fairmont, at that time State Superintendent of free schools, and previous to his election to that office, at the head of an academy in Fairmont, conceived the idea of asking for a branch of the Normal School to be established in Fairmont, and communicating this to his friends, among whom was ex-Governor A. B. Fleming, received their hearty support, and a charter was speedily obtained under the title, "The Regency of West Virginia Normal School."

By Chapter 123, Acts of 1867, an appropriation of $5,000 was secured from the State to be applied by said Regency in establishing a Normal School "for the purpose of educating and training teachers in the improved methods of instruction and discipline adopted in the common schools of other states."

By Chapter 146 of the Acts of 1868, the State Superintendent of schools was authorized to purchase of said Regency of West Virginia Normal School, its property at not more than $2,000, an additional appropriation of $3,000 to be made for the school after the purchase.

By act of the Legislature 1869, the Independent School District of Fairmont was authorized to place a part of the pupils of the district under the direction of teachers in the Normal School as a "Model School" to be taught in the Normal building. At that time the Normal School was conducted in a building on the corner where the Watson Hotel now stands, and known in the last few years of its existence as the Old Shot Tower.

Dr. W. R. White was the first principal, continuing as such until the fall of 1870, when he was succeeded by Prof. J. C. Gilchrist, who served one year, he in turn being succeeded by Dr. J. G.

Blair, of Parkersburg, a former vice-president of the Ohio State University. Dr. Blair remained at the head of the school until his death in December, 1878.

However far the Normal School wandered in subsequent years from its original purpose—that of offering professional training for teachers—it is clear from the record that it set out with that in view. In the earliest published catalogue, that of 1873-4, we find two courses, viz: Elementary Normal Course and Professional Normal Course. The subjects scheduled under the latter were wholly professional, and sound quite modern.

No record, so far as found by the writer, explains when, or how, or why the Fairmont Normal ceased to be a training school for teachers and became merely an academic institution, but tradition says that opposition to the principal, Dr. Blair, growing out of partisan politics, was the cause of the disunion between the Normal School and the Public School.

The Board of Instruction for 1873-4, as the faculty was then called, contained fourteen members, one of whom, Miss Alice V. Hewes, was the music instructor. Other members of the Board of Instruction were Dr. Blair's assistant, Miss M. L. Dickey; Miss Lucy Fleming, sister of ex-Governor Fleming; Prof. Thos. C. Miller, Principal of the Academic Department; B. L. Butcher, Assistant in Academic Department. The catalogue states that classes in German and French were conducted, but does not state by whom.

The catalogue of 1875-76 reports its Board of Instructors as consisting of Dr. J. G. Blair and Miss M. L. Dickey, with six assistant tutors, among whom are the names of Lee P. Watson, Miss Olive Zumbro, Jas. E. Mercer and Elias S. Amos.

By Chapter LXX, Acts of the Legislature 1872, an appropriation of $5,000 was made for a new building for the Normal at Fairmont, provided the Board of Education of Fairmont District would appropriate a like sum for the new building. This was done, and the present Second Ward school building was the then new home of the Normal, occupied for the first time in June, 1873.

For the very interesting history immediately following the writer is indebted to the Hon. B. L. Butcher:—

"The spring term of 1872 brought a large number of new students, and the first graduating class was announced; and the first commencement in the history of the school was staged with good effect late in June of that year. This exercise was held in the Methodist Protestant Church, or the "Church on the hill," as it was then called, which stood across the street from the school building, where the home of the late Colonel Clarence L. Smith now stands.

The Normal Literary Society had been organized during that school year, and during the spring term had gained greatly among the students, many of whom joined it. Its sessions were not open to visitors except by special invitation from a member, each of whom could invite one. It met each Saturday afternoon in the school building and was exclusively for the young men.

There had been generated among the students in the school, especially at the spring term, a very enthusiastic educational spirit and loyalty to the school and its teachers. Numerous pledges were made among the students to return for the fall term to complete the Normal course. A noticeable fact was that most of the students who attended the spring term were in fact teachers already, some of several years' experience; but feeling their lack of training and book knowledge, together with the desire for a diploma at graduation which would exempt them from examination, many of the best teachers in Marion and surrounding counties attended the Normal.

Sprinkled among these were representatives of many of the best families of the town and country, attending the school for college preparation.

The teachers, Dr. J. G. Blair, Miss M. L. Dickey and Mr. George M. Fleming, were most competent to instruct not only in English branches but Greek and Latin and higher mathematics.

School opened at 9 o'clock and closed at 4, with an hour for recess, but the teachers heard classes before school, after school, and after supper as well sometimes, besides giving a full day's work. They found most receptive soil and eager minds, and could not deny "the seed sowing" and "mental nectar" that stimulated and held the students with loyal hearts in love with the school.

Fairmont was then, as it had been described before, "a village on the side of a hill" half way between Clarksburg and Morgantown, but it had what few towns have had in "paying quantity," a most liberal and friendly disposition to those who came to the town, whether on business, as visitors, teachers or students. The people seemed to the students—country boys and girls—more like country people than any town people they had ever met. The best homes were opened to them for room and board; and the social life of these families included the students in their homes, so that the students became acquainted with the families, the men and women of the community, and these families took personal interest in the school, and the students were their special concern, to be made feel at home; and want to come back. So far as this good quality has been lost, the city, now on its "seven hills," has deteriorated in its "fine home-like flavor" to the student on first acquaintance; but once the crust is broken, the same generous hospitality is found in abundance.

The fall term of 1872 brought back double the number of students of the spring term, with nearly all back who were in at that term. Dr. Blair and Miss Dickey again took charge, and had an assistant, Miss Laura Strader, of Jefferson County, who was added to the teaching force.

The Normal Literary Society increased in numbers and efficiency, still excluding visitors and allowing only young men to join. After the holidays, and perhaps about the opening of the spring term of 1873, a small number, including some of the leading members of the Literary Society, organized a new society called the "Philomathean," with Hyre I. Clark as president; he having graduated the year before, was at this time principal of the public schools of Fairmont, and Volney B. Trimblee, one of the brightest students in the Senior Class, was made secretary.

When it became generally known among the students, and especially among the members of the old society, that a new society had been organized, it had a most astonishing effect. Instead of treating it as a natural growth, and a good indication, a large number of the members of the old society regarded it as treason, insubordination, and in fact everything but something good. The matter was debated in and out of the old society, and the feeling did not subside until the end of the term, when the big graduating class of 1873, of twenty-five members, eliminated most of the leaders of both societies and ended the existence of the new one.

The commencement exercise in June, 1873, was a great affair. The large class was composed, for the most part, of persons who had taught before they came to the Normal. The exercises were held in the third story of the new Normal building on Main Street, front of the now old Second Ward School, which was just then approaching completion and was occupied for the first time.

The Seniors each prepared and delivered an oration and an essay. The commencement week idea was fully inaugurated, the baccalaureate sermon was delivered by the principal, Dr. Blair, on the Sunday preceding commencement.

The Alumni Association was organized on commencement day by the big graduating class, in Dr. Blair's old class-room in the north-east corner of the "first old" school building. A meeting of the class had been announced during the commencement exercises, and most of the members were present.

Hon. Thomas C. Miller, valedictorian of the class, was made president, and the other officers were chosen, including a program of performers for the next year's commencement, consisting of orations, essays and a poem."

In the year 1876-77 the name of Prof. U. S. Fleming appears on the Board of Instructors, and in the following year, that of W. S. Meredith.

The death of Dr. Blair occurred in December, 1878, and judging by the esteem with which his memory is cherished, he must have been a worthy man and a most popular and efficient teacher. Following his death, Miss M. L. Dickey, who from the first had been his capable assistant, was appointed principal, serving with marked success until in June, 1882, when she resigned to marry Colonel R. E. Fleming. At the same time, Miss Lucy Fleming, who had been Miss Dickey's first assistant, resigned and later married. In the year 1880-81 the name of U. S. Fleming again appears on the teaching force, being second assistant, while that of Marcus M. Ross appears as third assistant. In addition to these there was an instructor in music—Mrs. Pinnell—and ten "assistant pupils."

In the autumn of 1882 Prof. U. S. Fleming, as Acting Principal, took charge of the school with five assistants, two of whom are members of the present faculty—Prof. E. E. Mercer and Mrs. Morrow nee Miss Cameron.

The following year Prof. Conrad A. Sipe, a man of culture and scholarly attainments, was elected Principal, with Professor Fleming as First Assistant. Professor Mercer had withdrawn, and a new teacher in the person of Miss May Jackson, a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College, and a young woman of strong character and attractive personality, was added to the faculty.

At the close of that year, 1884, Professor Fleming resigned, and Miss Cameron was chosen First Assistant, remaining in that position during Professor Sipes' administration. In the spring of '85 J. Walter Barnes came in as a teacher. In the year 1884-85 the music department was in charge of Miss Effie Reed, daughter of Rev. J. B. Reed, at that time pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Fairmont; and an art department was established, with Miss Ross Sweeney, of Wheeling, as instructor.

In 1887-88 Benjamin F. Ramage entered the school as a spring teacher, remaining in the school as teacher until his election as clerk of the Circuit Court, in 1890.

The year closing June 13, 1889, saw the largest attendance in the history of the school to that time—297—nor was it exceeded until the year 1894. Changes in the faculty had occurred—Miss Jackson having resigned at the close of the year 1888, and two new members having been added, Mr. C. W. Evans and Miss Lizzie Holland, afterwards wife of L. J. Corbly, while a department of Stenography and Typewriting had been established, with A. G. Sine in charge.

In August, 1889, Professor Sipe resigned to engage in business, and at a meeting of the Board held shortly afterward, Miss Cameron, who for five years had been Assistant to the Principal, was elected Acting Principal, with J. Walter Barnes, Assistant, and Secretary of the Faculty.

In June, 1890, Miss Cameron resigned to marry George Morrow, of Fairmont, and the Board elected Prof. John Roemer, of Wheeling, to succeed her. Among the new members of the faculty were Miss A. B. Boyd, a graduate of Wooster University, now Mrs. C. M. Ritchie, of Fairmont, and Miss Mary E. Knight, now Mrs. George Price, of this city. For two or three years Francis Brown had been the teacher of elocution.

Professor Roemer served but one year, being succeeded by Prof. J. C. Gwynn, of Wheeling, who also served but one year, being succeeded by J. Walter Barnes, who had been a member of the school since the spring of 1885, and assistant principal since the fall of 1889. During Professor Gwynn's administration there were eight regular faculty members and seven student assistants, Miss Eliza Hayden, of Fairmont, having charge of the music.

Miss Irene T. Myers, a strong teacher with a forceful personality, was Assistant Principal. Another of the largely increased faculty was Miss Ella Miller, now Mrs. W. S. Neayers, of this city.

The school with the passing years had been steadily growing until now it had practically outgrown its quarters, and largely through the efforts of Professor Barnes, sentiment for a new building was aroused. On March 9, 1891, the Legislature passed a bill providing for the sale of the state's interest in the old building for $15,000, and appropriating $20,000 additional for the erection of a new Normal School building.

In February, 1892, at the city of Charleston, the contract for the new building was let; on June 14 following, the cornerstone was laid with imposing ceremonies, and on March 27, 1893, the school took possession of its new home, its present quarters.

With new buildings, new equipment and a large and strong faculty, together with Professor Barnes' energy and fruitful advertising, the school grew and prospered.

Professor Barnes was in charge of the school until 1901, when he was succeeded by Prof. Marcus M. Ross, a native of Marion County, who for a number of years had been a teacher in Nashville, Tennessee.

Professor Ross entered upon his work with Prof. M. C. Lough as Assistant Principal, and despite considerable opposition from without, closed his first year's work in a satisfactory manner, with the good will of students and faculty. In the autumn of 1902, Professor Ross went hopefully to his task; but soon ill health overtook him, and while struggling bravely against it, and working with unflagging zeal for the school, he succumbed to the disease, and his fine, brave spirit passed to the great beyond. This was a blow to the school and a shock to the entire community. Subsequently, an impressive memorial service was held, at which the principal address was made by C. W. Waddell, then a member of the faculty, now a prominent physician of this city. Prof. M. C. Lowe became Acting Principal, conducting the school to the end of the year; shortly after which he withdrew from the teaching profession and subsequently went into journalism. During the administration of Professor Ross, Miss Ida Abbott, Prof. E. E. Mercer and Prof. H. F. Rogers became members of the faculty.

In the fall of 1893 Prof. W. L. McCowan, Principal of the West Liberty Normal, was elected Principal of the Fairmont Normal, with Professor Mercer as Assistant Principal. Other members of this faculty were Miss Mable Moderwell, Prof. W. R. Shaw, Miss Mollie Virginia Smith and Miss Willa Hart Butcher, a graduate of the West Virginia University. Miss Butcher was teacher of Greek and Latin, and a leading member of the faculty. The Departments of Music, of Art, and of Expression were all operative under skilled teachers.

An insistent growing demand for trained teachers began now to make its impression upon West Virginia educators, and Prof. T. C. Miller, State Superintendent of Schools, with the co-operation of the other members of the Board of Regents, decided to establish a Department of Education in the Fairmont Normal School, and accordingly in the spring of 1905, Professor Miller secured Miss Isabel Davenport, a post-graduate student of Columbia University, to be the head of that department.

The following autumn Professor McCowan was succeeded by Prof. U. S. Fleming as Principal. Professor Fleming, while not in robust health, entered enthusiastically upon his duties, determined to meet the demand for professionally trained teachers, and to place the Normal School once more in the ranks of a real training school. Miss Davenport continued at the head of the Department of Education, and in the spring of 1906, a "Model School," containing two grades, was organized, with Miss Rowland, of Wisconsin, as expert teacher, all student teachers being under the immediate supervision of Miss Davenport. While the "Model School" had but two grades, it was a model school.

This same year another step in advance was taken through Professor Miller's zeal for his alma mater, in the erection and furnishing of the Woman's Hall. This building was occupied for the first time in the spring of 1906, and Miss Mollie Virginia Smith was placed in charge of the young women occupants.

The next year, 1907, Miss Davenport was transferred to the principalship of the Concord Normal School. Mrs. Morrow, who had resumed teaching the spring previous, was placed in charge of the educational department, with Miss Mary E. George, of New York, in charge of the "Model School" as expert teacher.

The last year of Professor Fleming's administration was an incessant struggle on his part against disease, and at the end of the year, his health continuing to fail, he resigned, and Dr. C. J. C. Bennett was elected in his stead, with J. G. Rohrbaugh as Assistant and teacher of Latin and Greek.

Dr. Bennett was an enthusiast for professional training, and bent practically all his energies in the direction of the establishment of a Training Department. Miss Montana Hastings was selected as the head of the department, with Miss Mary E. George as assistant. The "Model School" gave place to a "Practice School," with six grades installed. The following year the regular eight grades were installed and Miss Anne Austin, now at the head of the Training School in Concord Normal, was elected as one of Miss Hastings' assistants. Later, Professor Rohrbaugh was transferred to the principalship of Glenville Normal, and Miss George subsequently became his training teacher.

The training department touched a responsive chord in the hearts of young men and women ambitious to be teachers, and there was a largely increased attendance of students. Dr. Bennett further showed a progressive spirit in the inauguration of a summer school.

During the three years of Dr. Bennett's administration there had been several changes in the faculty: Professor Rohrbaugh's place was filled by Professor Stooksbury; Dr. A. J. Davis, Professor Beer, Professor Scherf and Miss Elizabeth Stalnaker had been added to the teaching force, together with Miss Mayme Ware, of Huntington, as teacher of Expression. At the beginning of Dr. Bennett's second year, Professor Scherf resigned to accept a position in the East, and the vacancy was filled by Prof. H. F. Rogers.

At the close of the school year June, 1910, Dr. Bennett resigned to accept a position in the University of Oregon. To succeed him, the Board of Regents elected Prof. O. I. Woodley, of New Jersey, as President, with Professor Stooksbury as Assistant. Recently Prof. Chester P. Higby was elected to the position of Assistant President, Professor Stooksbury having resigned at the beginning of this year to take a position in Savannah, Georgia.

If Dr. Bennett was enthusiastic concerning the training school, Professor Woodley is equally so, with the advantage of having been for years closely connected with the public schools.

This is now the third year of his connection with the school, and there has been great improvement in the better organization of the school, in the standard of scholarship, and in the evolution of the training school toward that more nearly ideal.

The prospect for the Fairmont Normal School was never brighter. The recent Legislature authorized the sale of the present building and the purchase of a new site; and the erection in the not remote future of a substantial building adequate to the needs of a professional school for teachers is assured.

The Training School

THE most telling testimonial for the efficacy of the Fairmont Normal Training School is found in the high grade of work being done this year by teachers who did practice teaching in the Training School last year. Letters of appreciation have been received from various ones, in which they give much credit for their success to the practical help they received by coming in contact with real teaching problems in this way. Just as the pianist gains skill only through practice, so the teacher reaches her highest attainment only through experience. There must be a starting place for her experience, and it is too obvious to require elaboration that the safest and best way to gain initial experience in teaching is where the best standards and conditions prevail; and where the prospective teacher has critical but sympathetic supervision. Students have co-operated heartily with the critics and supervisors and many have developed wonderfully during their practice work. Others have shown little or no teaching ability, and have been refused certificates and advised to take up another line of work. This is much better than giving certificates to students and learning, too late, that they were not fitted to teach.

For the most part, the parents and citizens of Fairmont have given loyal support to the Training School work and faculty, and this is greatly appreciated. To be sure some few have found fault, but it has been from lack of understanding of the principles and aims underlying the Training School idea.

With the consensus of the best educational thought in its favor and the splendid beginning it has made we are very confident that the Fairmont Normal Training School is here to stay.

GEORGE H. SHAFER, A. B., A. M.
Education, and Superintendent of Training School

STUDENT Allegheny College, 1898-1901; University of Chattanooga, 1906; Graduate student University of Pennsylvania Summer School, 1908; New York University, 1909; Fellow in Psychology and Pedagogy, Clark University, 1910-11; A. M. Clark University, 1911; Principal Graham Collegiate Institute, 1901-1903; Superintendent of Schools Del Norte, Colo., 1903-1905; Professor of Pedagogy Edinboro State Normal School, Edinboro, Pa., 1908-1911.

CECYL C. WILCOX

The jolliest class that ever was seen.

What care we for unlucky thirteen? THIRTEEN! THIRTEEN!

MOTTO

Nihil sed optime.

JAY SNODERLY

Fairmont, W. Va.

"Senator," as he is sometimes called, is a very fitting name for this young man. As president of our class he has led us to the top round in the ladder of F. S. N. S. He is an athlete of much renown and was captain of the basketball team. The girls found him an admirable coach, also an admired one.

When he comes to gather in the results of effort and efficient work, his harvest will be plentiful and his life will be sustained by coffers filled with high ideals and lofty ambitions.

HELEN ALLEN

Flemington, W. Va.

How shall we describe the secretary of our class? As a student? Yes; one with push and energy which always results in success and the admiration of faculty and fellow students. As one efficient in social lines? Yes; she always helps others with a witty remark and always has a smile that won't wear off. She also has bright ideas to suggest and has the tact of entertaining at least "one." She has developed a wonderful liking for "Jewish" people, but we feel sure that this will make the lingering memories of the F. S. N. S. all the more pleasant for her.

ADAH WILSON

Harrisville, W. Va.

Here is to Adah, that dark-haired girl,
 Who sets the heads of several boys awirl.
 She's witty, she's pretty, she's spunky and shy (?),
 With a fondness for lesson plans that never will die.
 If you're curious about "cases,"
 Who loves who, and can't get them to "'fess,"
 Ask Adah—she'll tell you all happenings of F. S. N. S.

RAY MATTHEW

Independence, W. Va.

Here is one of whom the class is justly proud. He possesses remarkable business ability. He has the organizing power of a Burk and the stick-to-itiveness of a bulldog. The Senior Class recognized his superiority in these respects and elected him business manager of THE MOUND.

His mind, however, is not always occupied with matters of this kind, for he is also quite an athlete. He is just the same Ray—yesterday, today and tomorrow, and is held in highest esteem by all the members of the institution.

J. HOMER BELL

Auburn, W. Va.

J. Homer is one of the most distinguished members of the class. His matter-of-fact way in dealing with all problems that come up is one of his chief characteristics. He displays great oratorical powers, and will no doubt become a renowned statesman of the future.

PEARL BRAKE

Auburn, W. Va.

Pearl is one of the priceless jewels of the class. She does not always wear an angelic expression on her countenance, for Pearl is a jolly, good natured girl. She has ideas of her own and can always be depended upon to say just what she thinks. We shall not attempt to enumerate her accomplishments, for they are legion.

BESS TUTTLE

Wheeling, W. Va.

This is the girl who, by her charming personality, good acting and sweet voice, won for herself the appropriate title, "Laughing Star," in our great success, "Powhatan." We all thought this a very fitting role for Bess to fill, as she is one of the shining stars of our class and is never seen except when smiling and in a good humor. This may be the reason why she has so many friends and ardent admirers.

AUBREY HILDRETH

Mannington, W. Va.

Better known as "Jew." This complex little giant is the editor of THE MOUND. He is noted for his dignity, seriousness, wit, good grades and love affairs.

There is nothing that can compare with him as suitably as the sun, for as it shines resplendent and goes down at night, leaving with us a feeling of everlasting peace; so he has shone in our midst, and goes out leaving a lasting memory of respect and esteem.

CLINTON TUSTIN

Cork, W. Va.

If any member of the class could be called a genius, that one is Clint. He can write a lesson plan, make a speech, or bluff the faculty better than any other person in the Senior Class. He has a keen intellect, strong imaginative power, and great argumentative ability. As a student, he is a success, but he frequently snores too loud during his naps in English class.

EDITH FREY

Fairmont, W. Va.

This pretty maid came to us this year from the local High School, but during her brief stay here she has become an enthusiastic Normalite. Notwithstanding her social tendencies, she has found time to be a very energetic worker on the Mound Board. Her pleasant smile and charming ways have won for her quite a large circle of friends in this school.

ELVERTA GROVES

Earl, W. Va.

Here is a black-eyed lassie who has done wonders in the Training School and is very desirous of knowledge. She is one of our famous basketball players and can always be counted on to do her best. It is rather hard to designate what the future holds for her, but no doubt it is something unusual and distinguished.

GLENN HALL

Pullman, W. Va.

We are certain that there is a distinguished place in Fame's Hall for Glenn. Although he seldom smiles, we have yet to see him in a bad humor. He accomplishes everything he attempts and makes a success of every undertaking. The lecture course which he managed was the best the Normal ever gave. The Mozart Society has in him a faithful member, who will always be remembered for his loyalty and sincerity.

PAUL WATKINS

Watson, W. Va.

Paul has been our mainstay in athletics this year. He played a faultless game on the football team as its captain and center. He also starred at guard in basketball, and as its manager succeeded equally as well.

He is loved by his teachers because of his smooth, soft voice, which soothes their ruffled nerves better than any patent medicine on the market today.

LESTER JACKSON

Jane Lew, W. Va.

With piercing eyes and sunny smile, Lester goes about her duties with determination to win. Dormitory rules do not restrict her "night out," and she uses the privilege freely. We feel that her intelligence, sincerity and good nature have earned the words of the poet:

"None knew thee but to love thee;
None named thee but to praise."

JESSIE PRICE

Fairview, W. Va.

Jessie is one of our popular Dormitory lasses who finds time to study geometry every afternoon, and take long walks every evening. She is very sentimentally inclined, especially along literary lines. Her favorite verse of poetry is:

Oh, for a seat in some poetic nook,
Just hid with trees and sparkling with a brook,
Where we can go and stay
And cast loving glances the whole long day.

FRED BRADLEY

Grafton, W. Va.

Mr. Bradley is a young man of wonderful ability. He is also a great dreamer, or in other words, his fondness for sleep is exceeded only by his fondness for long walks and talks, and for studying geometry with a certain person of great "Price." We expect, however, that he will outgrow his dreamy nature and will some day waken to the realities of life with amazing force.

MARY HITE

Fairmont, W. Va.

"Modest and shy as a nun is she," but still she has succeeded in captivating the heart of one Bob Richards. This, however, is not to be wondered at, when we consider her sweet disposition and her pretty brown curls.

Mary is quite a student, too, and is energetically preparing herself to train the tender minds of her future pupils.

CARRIE HARPER

Davis, W. Va.

Carrie is the midget of our class as far as stature is concerned, but when it comes to the mental phase she is as big as any. Despite her diminutiveness she is some basketball player, and can hold her own with the largest. She has a wonderful fondness for the boys (?), but it does not seem to interfere with her school duties. Here's hoping that the little miss will achieve great success in her career.

BERTHA BICE
Bridgeport, W. Va.

"Have you read that book for Mr. Shafer's class?" is a question often heard from Bertha. She always has read anything required and can tell you all about it. Her interest in literary society is very marked, and she attends all the lectures and other "junk" of the season, all of which we hope will aid her in her life work.

WALTER MORAN

Fairmont, W. Va.

You are now gazing at the wizard of the class, so far as making grades is concerned. He never found time for anything but study until his Senior year, when athletics and girls began to impress him as important factors in his school life. So he turned his mind to basketball, with the result that he was one of the fastest men on the Senior team. As to the girls, we remain silent. He will answer to either the name "Cicero" or "Drake."

ELIZABETH CONOWAY

Fairmont, W. Va.

Elizabeth is one to whom every one looks up, for lo! she towers above us all, even Colebank. She is quite a successful teacher and also manages the girls' wonderful basketball team. She has been very much interested in boy's basketball, too, but the reason is not exactly known. Her interests, however, are varied and her ideals are very high.

ELVA STALNAKER

Flatwoods, W. Va.

"This talking must be stopped."

Any one who has been in the library while Elva is in charge has heard this. With this determined, yet cheerful manner she will conquer all problems of her schoolroom and win the love of all.

GEORGIA LEMASTERS

Parkersburg, W. Va.

Georgia is one of those quiet little girls who never seems to notice anything that happens, but is always ready to answer any question that may be asked. She displays a great deal of talent in music and is an honor to the Class of '13.

WEST MANLEY

Fairmont, W. Va.

Here is the young man with agricultural aspirations. As we have been hearing that the farmers are, in the near future, to be the great men of the time, we are all hoping and expecting to see this one of our classmates enrolled in the list of "people worth knowing."

MORRIS HALLER

Flemington, W. Va.

Morris, or "Jake," as he is sometimes called, is the standby of the class. He has the face of a cherub and is as meek and submissive as a lamb. He is somewhat inclined toward athletics, and has shown himself to be quite a basketball player. Recently he has been showing a slight weakness for the fair sex, but we are not able to predict the outcome of this tendency. His loyalty and agreeable disposition will ever be remembered by his many friends.

GEORGIA BILLINGSLEA

Worthington, W. Va.

"George" is another one of those quiet little girls who always does her work, and during all the years she has been in this school she has never broken a single rule. She is disposed to look on things from an optimistic standpoint. Her most noticeable characteristics are her humor, loyalty and an ardent love for the Training School.

TRIXIE CLELLAND

Catawba, W. Va.

This fair damsel comes from First Ward, to adorn the halls of the Normal, and to make brilliant the class-rooms. Some day she will adorn and make brilliant other rooms than these, but we can't tell where—in all probability the school-room (?).

L. T. TUSTIN

Coik, W. Va.

Loyd has been here, off and on, for so long that he has come to be regarded as one of the fixtures of the institution. He has a "lean and hungry look," but this is probably accounted for by the fact that he has been overexerting himself at the Training School. Loyd is one of the most diligent students in school and is much respected by both students and faculty.

EARL G. HARVEY

Newburg, W. Va.

This young man has been in our midst for the last few years and has won for himself a friendly feeling in the hearts of all who know him. He is a brilliant student and takes great interest in literary work. Last year he surprised the entire school by his speedy football playing. He has been making quite a record in the Training School, and we believe he will some day become one of the prominent educators of the state.

IRMA CONAWAY

Barrackville, W. Va.

This is another of our quiet, dignified classmates who very seldom expresses opinions, but she has very definite ones along some lines. If anything in the class has been forgotten Irma can tell you—she'll not forget.

ROBERTA JACKSON

Grafton, W. Va.

"Bertie" came from Grafton to creep into the hearts of Normal people. Such a witty, "jolly," busy little being she is! On most of her books is written the letters " $\Phi \Sigma$ ." Of course it means something, but only her best friends have learned what it is.

HAROLD ROGERS

Moundsville, W. Va.

Harold's home is in the city of Moundsville, and we might add, by way of explanation, that he resides there of his own free will. He has already served quite a long term at teaching, and came to the Normal to imbibe some other people's ideas. You must not judge from this, however, that Harold has acquired a great number of years, for he has ever been a precocious child. Like most of the other students, he has his love affairs, but, aside from Saturday night calls, this does not interfere with his school work.

ADDIE BURNETTE

Farmington, W. Va.

Here is one girl who believes that "silence is golden." We believe that her temperament is peculiarly suitable for the teaching profession and we can predict for a successful career in guiding the young lives along the slippery paths of knowledge.

LAURA JONES

Fairmont, W. Va.

She comes and goes like a butterfly, but while she is there she is there for a purpose. Her mind frequently goes wandering to the Navy. Is it for a purpose? Her career as a school teacher is sure to be a glorious one.

AELETA VANTROMP

French Creek, W. Va.

Aleta is very much interested in the University. We can't quite determine the reason for this. She aspires to be an eminent educator and we are sure her aspirations will be realized, because being the student she is the "doors of knowledge will be opened to her."

H. H. McMILLAN

Masontown, W. Va.

This young man is known among the boys as "Mac" and among the girls as "Grinny." It is said that Mac has broken more hearts with that smile than all the other boys in school have ever been able to crack.

Besides being a heart smasher, he is some athlete. He played one of the halfback positions on the football team last fall, and he sure played it right, not only for his own glory and honor, but for the school's as well.

C. K. ROMESBURG

Clifton Mills, W. Va.

Romesburg is one of the sturdy sons of Preston County, the land of sorghum and buckwheat. He is not athletically inclined, nor does he trouble his mind much about the daughters of the earth. The teaching profession has some attraction for him, and he is bending every effort to become proficient along that line.

MYRTLE MICHAEL

Farmington, W. Va.

This distinguished young lady is a teacher of renown. She is noted for talking (?), laughing (?), and conversing with young men (?). The future holds much for this quiet (unpretentious) namesake of the Saint.

KATHERINE MORRIS

Hagans, W. Va.

With blue eyes that seem to fit her spirit, she flits from place to place, spreading happiness as she goes. Even the Training School pupils feel refreshed after having been in her presence. Although small of stature, she has great ability, and for this reason she has become one of the most prominent ladies in our class.

WINNIE MUSGROVE

Fairmont, W. Va.

Winnie believes in enjoying life before "the evil days come nigh and she shall say 'there is no joy in them.'" She is quite an athletic enthusiast, and has attended every basketball game this year. She believes in woman suffrage and contemplates entering the matrimonial field.

MABEL LOWE

Fairmont, W. Va.

This demure young lady is quite a big proposition, when it comes to physical, mental and spiritual size. She is essentially of a big nature and in her heart she has room for all who might wish to seek entrance. When she starts in her life work, may she reap as bountifully as she has sown.

LUCY ROSS

Selma, Ind.

This girl from the "Hoosier" state has, through study and diligence, won a place in the hearts of the faculty; and by her musical ability has touched the hearts of her fellow "Dormitorians." Her only failing is, that she does not like Dorm meals and escapes them whenever it is possible.

BESSIE BERRY

Sutton, W. Va.

Bessie is one of the recent additions to our class. Nature has kindly blessed her with a robust physique and much avoir du pois. She is generally recognized as the funniest girl in school and is noted for her jovial disposition and broad, sunny smile. Wit and humor seem to be a part of her nature, and her "hobby" is studying history for Mr. Higby's class.

VERONA CLAYTON

Rivesville, W. Va.

This fair-haired maiden is one of Glenville's graduates. She came to the Normal last fall, and during her stay here has conducted herself in a most commendable manner. She has shown a slight weakness for the sons of men, but that is the failing of her kind. Quite a basketball player is Verona.

Senior History

THE events of the yesterdays of this class are not related merely for the sake of those worthy and unworthy actions on our part, but in order that you may understand the high standards of this Normal School. Nor shall we tell of the petty misunderstandings which we have had from time to time. But we shall review our school career in the large, since it is upon those achievements that this institution will base its future prosperity.

As we let our memories glide over the work of our yester-years it all seems to form itself into a long game of chess, in which the school was our board and our classmates were the chessmen.

We, the class of nineteen hundred thirteen have met the problems set before us by the faculty and our schoolmates. In the beginning, coming as we did from the many hillsides of this "Little Mountain State," we were a class endowed with many capacities. This every one seemed to realize. So problem after problem was shoved our way for solution. We met them cheerfully.

The athletic managers wanted stars for their teams, and from our ranks stepped some of the mightiest warriors that ever fought for the honor of the school. The literary societies began to deteriorate, and to their aid came our most eloquent orators, who won honor and glory for their societies. The student body organization needed men of business ability, and from our members came those whose tireless energy gave the school success in financial matters.

Finally the faculty made known their desire to raise the standard of this Normal School in order to meet the educational needs of the state. The class of 1913, filled with enthusiasm, took upon itself new difficulties which caused its members to return for the summer term. Hence they worked hand in hand with the faculty in making this school what it is, and this was done with such zeal and cheerfulness that the faculty proclaimed us the chosen young people of West Virginia.

I do not intend that this history shall sound boastful. We are, all of us, very meek students. We have only won our game of chess. Will the world stand aside and say, "They are leaders?" Not so. We must prove to the critics that we are capable teachers and students. Then shall the vast experience of these fruitful years come to our aid at all times. It is on this account that the saddest event of our history shall be our leaving this dear old school. However, we are comforted by the feeling that although we must go, our spirit of progressiveness has been instilled in the hearts of those to come.

IVANHOE ARNETT

Rivesville, W. Va.

He is so full of pleasant anecdotes;
So rich, so gay, so poignant in his wit,
Time vanishes before him as he speaks
And ruddy morning through the lattice peeps,
Ere night seems well begun.

JEAN LYNN

Fairmont, W. Va.

She came from everywhere into here
To widen her educational sphere;
And to her books she does adhere
Until the midnight hour draws near.

CHARLES HOLLAND

Little Falls, W. Va.

I pass like night from land to land,
I have strange powers of speech;
So soon as e'er his face I see,
I know the man that must hear me,
To him my tale I teach.

THELMA SWISHER

Rivesville, W. Va.

Her loveliness so absolute she seems,
And in herself complete; so well to know
Her own, that she wills to do or say,
Seems wisest, virtuousest, discreetest, best.

W. C. SMITH

West Union, W. Va.

It is strange to see the ravenous appetite
with which Willie devours geometry proposition. Yet he does not apply all his time to this, because he must have some time to devote to the fairest of all the creatures.

MARGARET HALL

Harrisville, W. Va.

Lo! when she was young she took aim at wisdom and came to the Normal. Now even the soothsayers marvel.

GOLDIA TRIPPET

Little Falls, W. Va.

A shark in Latin, you say? Ye gods!
if she could be better in Latin than she is in Review I pity the rest of us.

LORENA BERRY

Rivesville, W. Va.

Of all the girls that are so sane,
There's none like Lorena Berry.
She always goes to every game,
And was never known to tarry.

MAE YOST

And we hope that some day
There will come her way,
A lad with a great deal of cash.

VERA SHAW

Grafton, W. Va.

Everywhere you go there is "Lovey" or "Dovey." This is the one case for which the Normal is famous; the only one of the kind in West Virginia. Both are girls.

FRANK ICE
Fairmont, W. Va.
He speaks the kindest words, and looks such things,
Vows with such passion, swears with such grace,
That 'tis a kind of heaven to be deluded by him.

BLANCHE HILL

Fairmont, W. Va.

Her modest looks the cottage night adorn,
Sweet as the primrose peeps beneath the thorn.

L. S. CORNWELL

Marquess, W. Va.

The laughter of girls is and ever was the most delightful sound of earth.

EMMA REXROAD

Kingwood, W. Va.

Sweet, thou hast trod on a heart;
Pass! there's a world full of men;
And women as fair as thou art
Must do such things now and then.

C. ROYAL KESSEL

Ripley, W. Va.

He is "a man of few words."

He condenses his wit into a few brief sentences which are intensely pungent. He is oratorical, rhetorical, and an adroit perambulator of ingenuity.

REUBEY HALL

Pullman, W. Va.

Untouched by love, this maiden's breast
Is like the snow on Rona's crest;
So pure, so free from earthly dye,
It seems, whilst leaving on the sky,
Part of the heaven to which 'tis nigh.

KILE SWISHER

Jane Lew, W. Va.

Maidens fresh as fairest rose,
Listen to this lay of mine.

DORTHA KNAPP

He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
Foreknowing well if there he came to lie,
Why, there love lived, and there he could not die.

NEVA CURREY

Fairmont, W. Va.

This modest little maiden came into our class last fall. Her voice is soft and gentle as the summer breeze, and she can warble a song as sweetly as an oriole. There are very few girls like Neva, and the class is proud of her.

Junior Class History

WHEN our class of 1914 entered this institution three years ago as freshmen, the upper classes laughed at us and called us green, as indeed we were. But things which are green and fresh and young have one advantage—if given the proper sort of soil they are sure to grow; and we grew, profiting by our experience not only in life's "school of hard knocks," but also in the Normal School of many rules.

At first these rules rather frightened us, but soon we learned that if we were "in one of three places" when any of the faculty were near, we were almost certain to be safe.

The brilliancy and accomplishments of our class are most wonderful to behold; even the teachers admit that. In fact, we feel that we may say with all modesty that we have in every way far outshone all the preceding classes, and we doubt if any which are to follow will equal us.

We are well represented in all the different organizations, and from our number many officers of the student body and literary societies have been chosen.

In athletics we have gained a great reputation, and the fame of our basketball team has been spread far and wide.

Several of our number are talented along literary and aesthetic lines. The Friday evening programs are always a success if these Juniors take a part in the entertainment. Often Freshies, Sophs—and yes, even Seniors, have gone home encouraged and hopeful because of the inspiring readings, debates, and musical numbers by these gifted ones.

We shall not say much concerning our progress in studies, for it does not become a class to be boastful. Let it suffice to state that cwing to the ability of our eloquent talkers to bluff, and because we are all naturally bright, we have comparatively few flunks in our midst.

Next year we shall be Seniors, and of course we will keep on progressing. Nor shall our growth end with graduation. This shall be simply a commencement in education and achievement. We hope to still be heard of frequently after we have left the Normal School. It is inevitable that a class with such a history must have a future, but we leave this to the Prophet. All our wonderful works of the past and those which are now going on, have resulted because we were dissatisfied with ourselves as a class.

"And from the discontent of man,
The world's best progress springs.
Then we'll feed the flame,
(From God it came).
Until we mount on wings."

Junior Class Poem

ONCE when fairies lived on earth,
And sometimes to men would give
Priceless gifts of joy and mirth,
Which would make them glad to live,
All the fairies had a May-day
On the green banks of a lake,
And in song and dance and play,
Did these tiny folk partake.

After while they tired of fun.
Then the fairy queen exclaimed:
"I shall do what I've ne'er done;
I'll prophesy what I've ordained.
In nineteen ten shall come a class
To the Fairmont Normal School,
Whose fame and glory shall not pass,
And none of them be thought a fool.

Thus spake the little fairy queen;
Then all resumed their play.
But the truth, the whole wide world has seen
Of what the fairy said that day.

"It shall subjugate all others,
Cause the faculty to quake,
To the gods, they'll all be brothers,
They at will the earth may shake.
They shall all of them have talent,
And each one be blessed with power.
You may know this comp'ny gallant,
For mock orange shall be their flower.

"Famed shall be the Junior year
Of this nineteen fourteen class;
And memories long shall be held dear,
Of things which then shall come to pass.
Not one, when he graduates
And to old Normal says farewell,
And takes leave of all his classmates,
Would for wealth these memories sell."

SOPHOMORE CLASS

Sophomore Class History

IN the fall of 1911, in many communities of at least half a dozen counties of this state, a desire for knowledge took possession of a number of young men and women and they were soon on their way to the Fairmont Normal School. Once there, they settled down, organized and became known as the Freshmen Class. The first year was a trying one for this class; they had just assumed the great responsibilities that a class must bear in a school that is fitting the young and tender minds to become the teachers and leaders of men.

All the hardships of the freshmen year, however, were overcome and the class—joined by others who had become inspired to prepare themselves for a happier and more useful life—again appeared at the doors of the Normal School and took on a new honor, that of Sophomores.

As the standards of scholarship have been raised in the school, so have the abilities of the class increased to meet that demand. And as a result we have the class of '15 with its harmonious organization on an equal basis with the same class of any other secondary school.

In this organization are boys and girls from the rural communities and from the towns, all co-operating to make a record for the class of '15; to make sophomoredom not a dreaded round in the ladder of preparation, but one of joy and delight as well as one of serious thoughtfulness. These young people wish so to perfect their preparation that they can honorably and efficiently perform their duties when they take on a new dignity and are hailed as the Junior Class.

Some of these have already performed a modicum of service for the state, having taught from one to five years in the rural and village schools where they have achieved success and left lasting impressions upon the minds of the youth under their guidance.

Not only is the class standing of these Sophomores good, but their social standing is also good—they having won the friendship and esteem of the Freshmen, Juniors and Seniors alike. They have been elected along with Juniors and Seniors to fill the offices of the Student Body Association, the Athletic Association, the Literary Societies and Y. W. C. A., in all of which they are active members. And indeed some of them are prominently mentioned in connection with the Inter-Society Contest. In fact no program would be complete without one or more of its members.

Even in athletics, that test of virility, Sophomores figured quite prominently. They gave "weight to the football team, speed to the basketball team, and curves to the diamond."

It may be said that the class owes its distinction to the fearlessness and determination with which it meets the problems that day by day come before it; and by adding to this untiring perseverance they hope to be able to conquer the two years' work yet before them in this school, and with this preparation to go on to fields of larger usefulness and opportunity.

"He who from zone to zone,
Guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight
In the long way that I must tread alone
Will lead my steps aright."

FRESHMEN CLASS

Freshmen Class History

ON the eleventh day of September, nineteen hundred twelve, a great event occurred in the annals of the Fairmont State Normal School. That eventful day marked the enrollment of a body of students who, from all appearances, seemed destined to become an inspiration and an honor to the institution.

These extraordinary young people have devoted themselves to their work in a manner which has astonished both the teachers and the other classes of the school. Such is the dignified appearance of this class that its members have, on various occasions, been taken for Seniors. These brilliant students have proved themselves normal in every respect excepting the fact that from the very beginning they have lacked that peculiar verdancy that from time immemorial has characterized Freshmen.

Although to any one judging from the standing of these it would appear that they have done nothing but study, yet this is not the case. They have realized that education consists of something more than book-learning alone, and so have resolutely guarded against their natural tendency to become mere book-worms. Yes, in some inexplicable manner they have been able to snatch enough time from drinking at the fountain of knowledge to attend all the operas, lectures, receptions and Dormitory festivities of the season. They have also taken a prominent part in the societies of the school.

Furthermore, from the beginning they have been enthusiastic athletic aspirants, and so have been a credit to the Athletic Association, of which they are interested members. They have practiced diligently on the football field, and bid fair to become the champion players of the future. In basketball they have already proved their ability.

And now, dear reader, we beg you to think of this account not as a completed history, but rather as an introduction to the record of the future accomplishments of this class. Thus the work of this first year forms merely the foundation on which to erect the structure of glorious achievements which are to be wrought by the Class of '16.

THE Student Body Association of the Fairmont State Normal School was organized on the first day of November, 1907, through the influence of the president, Dr. C. J. C. Bennett, and has been having a successful career ever since. The object of this organization is to unite the students into an effective body in order that they may assist in adopting and carrying out plans that are for the best interests of the school. Through it the students make known their desires to the faculty, and are rarely refused their requests.

The officers of this Association consist of a president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer and an executive committee consisting of five members. They are elected for a term of twenty weeks, with the exception of the executive committee, who serve for one school year.

Each student is assessed thirty cents per year for incidental expenses, and which makes him an active member in the Association, with equal rights of discussing and voting on questions under consideration. With the reserve money in the treasury, entertainments are often given, and in this manner the social life of the school is of the best in the state.

The outlook of the Student Body Association grows brighter each year. The amount of good it has done and can do is inestimable. No one knows this better than the present members, and each one is trying to make it the most important organization in the Normal. Its success has already been achieved, and the future looks brighter each day. In after years we shall feel proud to know that we were members of such an important body.

It was through the co-operation of the Student Body with the faculty that the legislature was influenced in making the appropriation for a new dormitory and granting the privilege of selling the old site of the Normal. This means that in a short while we shall have a new building which will better suit the needs of both teachers and students. This is one illustration of the kind of work done by the Student Body Association. As we look with pride upon the work it has done we may feel quite sure that it will ever continue to be one of the greatest factors in the school—ever doing what it finds to do toward the betterment of the Normal, and thus making its worth felt in the school and throughout the state. THE Young Women's Christian Association stands for all that is high and noble. Its aim is the development of higher religious, social and literary standards for its members, to bring the girls into closer relation to each other, and to be a help to the girls of the school in general. In after years we will remember with pleasure the helpful little meetings of the Y. W. C. A.

More and more do we realize the imperative need of stopping in the hurry of everyday routine to get quiet in His presence and to realize our dependence upon the Giver of life.

Young women of today want an all-round education, and this means falling in line with the most helpful agencies.

LYCEUM OFFICERS

History of the Lyceum Literary Society

IN the Spring of 1872, a few of the leading members of the student body of the Fairmont State Normal School met and organized the first literary society of the institution. This body, after many warm discussions, was christened "The Fairmont Normal Literary Society," but later, about 1875, when another literary society was formed in the same school, it was thought best to change the name, so it was called "The Lyceum Literary Society." The purpose of this organization, as stated at that time, was: "A mutual improvement in rhetoric, composition, oratory, parliamentary usage, general mental culture and vocal delivery." H. D. Clark was elected its first president and proved to be a very able man for the position. The society in a short while was in good working order, and has continued to progress since its formation.

The society, as we have stated, was well founded. However, there were a few members who desired to have a separate organization, and united with some spring students in forming the Mozart Literary Society. The same year, 1873, the ladies organized "The Alpha Literary Society." At this time neither the Lyceum nor the Mozart admitted ladies as members, and in fact, not until several years later was this sex prejudice overcome; then it was brought about by a change in the constitutions of the respective societies which made it possible for them to work together as one body. The wisdom of this course has been proven time and again by the help and influence that the lady members have rendered. We wonder now that such a distinction should ever have been made.

Shortly after the Mozart Society was organized they sent a challenge to the Lyceum for a friendly contest, which was held in June, 1875. With few exceptions, each year since, there has been a similar contest, which carries with it a certain bitterness of rivalry, but soon the scars of battle are healed and friendliness and good will prevail.

Since 1899, when Willis Smith, of Elkins, a former student of the F. S. N. S., gave the "Silver Wreath" to be given to the society which won in the annual contest, the combats have become interesting and attractive. Ex-members come from far and near to see and join in the celebrations of triumph. The Lyceum has not always won. The Mozarts from time to time have enjoyed the fruits of victory; but the wreath has spent most of its time adorning the walls and cheering the hearts of the members of the original society, and has for the last three years hung in the Lyceum hall.

Since its organization, the society has been one of the leading factors in the development of the school. In looking over some school reports we found some interesting facts concerning the Lyceum Society. It was foremost in starting the present library, and everything dealing with the growth of the school has been brought about largely by the help and influence of the Lyceum. In 1882 the graduating class was named "The Lyceum Class of '82," because all the members belonged to the Lyceum Literary Society.

Since the organization of this society many changes have taken place in both society and school. The little building which stood in North Fairmont gave way to the present one in 1892, and owing to the work of our present principal and faculty, the legislature has recently made appropriations for the building of a new Normal—one which will better suit the needs of both students and teachers. The school stands for a higher standard than formerly. The course has grown from a three-year academic to a six-year normal course, and the school is recognized as the leading Normal School in the state.

At the close of this, our forty-first year of literary work, we can look back upon our record with pride, knowing that the society has in every way gained the success that its friends wished it. The Lyceum has nearly one hundred active members who are foremost in class work and leadership. Many are the men and women whom the Lyceum has sent out all over the state—men and women who have accomplished that for which they have striven. Lyceum alumni are found in practically every profession, and all have been benefited by their experience in the work of the Lyceum. Its members have ever worked faithfully and borne in mind its motto: "Sic Itur Ad Astra."

History of the Mozart Literary Society

IN the early history of the Fairmont Normal School there was organized a society known as the "Mozart Literary Society." Its aim was to train young men and women in literary work, which consisted of oration, reading and debating. The Mozart advanced new ideas concerning society work and particularly in regard to membership.

Three years before the birth of the Mozart Society there was established a society known as the Lyceum. Ladies were not eligible to membership in it, but being the only organization of its kind in the school, it grew very rapidly. A few energetic students saw that only the young men were getting literary training, and began to talk of organizing a new society to which both young men and young women could make application for membership. On the eleventh day of March, 1875, a number of students met in what was then known as Miss Fleming's room for the purpose of founding this new society. Mr. A. A. Waters was made temporary chairman and P. Marteney, secretary. After a consultation a committee was appointed by the temporary chairman to confer with the faculty concerning the organization of a new literary society. On the sixteenth day of the same month another meeting was held, and the committee having made a favorable report, it was decided to make a permanent organization, which was done by electing F. P. Heskit, president; Perry Marteney, secretary; L. M. Wade, treasurer, and A. A. Waters, vice-president. The society began with a membership of seven, but at the close of the school year the number had increased to thirty.

Soon after the society was permanently organized a challenge was sent to the Lyceum for a contest. This was held at the close of the term, June, 1875. The contest passed in a friendly struggle, and with few exceptions, each succeeding year there has been a similar contest, which is one of the many interesting and exciting features of commencement week.

In 1899, a trophy of honor was given by Willis Smith, of Elkins, a former student of the Fairmont Normal. It was a "Silver Wreath," which was to be given to the winning society and was to be hung in their hall, where it was to remain until won by the other society. This has not been a one-sided affair, but it has hung on the walls of each society almost alternately.

Perhaps the greatest work which the Mozart Society has accomplished is the breaking down of sex prejudice and admitting both young men and young women, thereby bringing them into a closer and more helpful relationship. This, however, was not accomplished without great effort, for the constitution of the Lyceum did not admit ladies as members, and any action from the new society contrary to this custom was looked upon with disfavor. Since then the wisdom of the new plan has been proved and now both societies admit all on an equal basis.

As we look back upon our record of thirty-eight years, it is with a feeling of just pride. As long as the Fairmont Normal exists we expect to be found at the wheel helping to fit young people for life. Our members are ever trying to carry out our motto: "Ad piscirur lucem delabi."

Thy day has come, not gone,
Thy sun has risen, not set,
Thy life is now beyond the reach of death
Or change not ending, but begun.

The Normal Lecture Course

THE Normal Lecture Course has been a valuable and delightful feature of Normal School life for a number of years and it has steadily grown in popularity and favor, both with the students and with the citizens of Fairmont. The talent appearing on the course has always been the best that could be obtained with the funds available for that purpose, and as the growing patronage has increased the funds, the standard has been raised from year to year, reaching its highest level in the course offered during the present school year. The splendid attendance this year has entirely justified the wisdom of the committee in contracting for a course costing over $200 more than any previous course had cost, and containing one more than the usual number of attractions.

The course this year consisted of the following numbers: The Collegiate Quartette, of New York City; Robert Parker Miles, writer and lecturer; Ross Crane, cartoonist; ex-Governor Hanley, of Indiana; Margaret Stahl, dramatic reader; and Ralph Parlette, humorist and philosopher. There will be an extra number, the character of which has not yet been decided upon, but which in all probability will be the Coburn Players in a Shakespearean drama.

Under the present system the lecture is conducted by the Student Body Association. The Managing Committee consists of three members, viz: a manager elected by the student body, a student member appointed by the manager, and a faculty member appointed by the President of the Normal School. This year the personnel of the committee is as follows: F. Glen Hall, manager; Frank S. White, student member; Aubrey W. Martin, faculty member.

The selection of Mr. Hall as manager was indeed a happy one. He is a young man of great energy, fine judgment, and splendid executive ability, and has used all these qualities freely in behalf of the course, the success of which is largely due to his unfailing interest and activity.

It is hoped that the course may be strengthened next season by the addition of another musical number, but this will depend entirely upon the number of advance subscriptions obtained.

THE INDIAN OPERETTA

IF one were called upon to specify the most interesting event of the present school year, he would have no little difficulty in deciding, for the year has been rich in fine things. However, if purely local interests were made the criterion, there could be no question as to the decision, for all agree that the Indian opera, "Powhatan," which was presented at the Grand Opera House Tuesday, March 11, matinee and night, was indeed a delightful affair. The opera was given by Normal School students, assisted by some outside talent, and was produced under the direction of Mr. Baker, of Chicago.

While the undertaking was a brilliant success from an artistic standpoint, the attendance was not all that could be desired, and the receipts were correspondingly low. However, all expenses were paid and a small profit was realized.

The entertainment was especially valuable in the development of local talent, and some surprisingly good material was discovered. It is not the purpose of this article to discuss individual performances, but it should be said in passing, that the work of the entire cast more than justified the wisdom displayed in its selection. It is true, however, that a few artistic temperaments displayed a tiny trace of temper once or twice during rehearsals, but the delightful sweetness of their subsequent demeanor made the fault easy to forgive.

If any feature of the performance calls for special mention, it was the work of the chorus. Aside from a certain amount of stiffness due to the embarrassment occasioned by a first appearance, the work was much above the usual work of amateurs and was better than a great many professional choruses seen at the local theater. It is probable that a more beautiful company of Indian maidens was never before assembled. If the dusky prototypes of the characters represented on this occasion could have been present, they would have turned green with envy. For the make-believe squaw has some advantages over the aborigine who dwelt in the heart of the primeval forest many years ago, when to be a squaw required tenacious courage and a cheerful philosophy.

The thanks of the management are due and are hereby extended to all persons who in any way contributed to the success of the undertaking.

IT has been the aim of the Athletic Association for the past two or three years to conduct the athletics of the school so that they might be an honor to the institution.

The various branches of athletics came nearer measuring up to the standard this year than ever before.

Some of the teams were not as strong this year as they have been in the past, but then we played strong, clean games against opponents in our class; and if we lost we always felt sure that we had lost honorably.

On the whole, the past year has been very successful, and everything points to a more successful one for '13 and '14.

THE SQUAD

Football

THE 1912 football season was the most successful in the history of the school. At the beginning of the season, Coach Earnest Bell, a former W. V. U. player and an alumnus of this school, had practically a "green" team. However, after a game or two and the return of some old players, the team worked as though it were composed of veterans at the game.

We met two overwhelming defeats, one at the hands of D. and E. College early in the season, and the other at Wesleyan, whom we considered clear out of our class. The other games we lost were close scores and seemed the result of hard luck rather than bad playing on the part of our boys.

While the percentage of games won is not so high, yet it must be remembered that we played the strongest teams in the state, something we never did in former seasons.

The back field, composed of Strickler, Colebank, McMillen, Bowermaster and Stenger, was heavy and fast, and gave some of the most sensational playing ever seen on a local team. Their sensational and successful playing, however, could never have been accomplished had it not been for the strong line in front of them.

Every man on the line was big and strong and well suited for his position. Powell and Laulis, at the ends, were very fast and covered a vast amount of ground. Hull and Matthew, as tackles, played their positions well. Tustin and Ice, at guard, protected Capt. Watkins at all times, especially when he desired to uncork that puzzling "fake" play of his.

Capt. Watkins, Colebank and Strickler played exceptionally strong games, and to them is due in a great measure the success of the team. Everything now indicates a strong team and a successful season for '13.

THE TEAM

Basketball

THE basketball season was rather "jerky" for some time after it started. On account of the absence of all last year's players, except one, it was necessary to go into the class league and bring out practically a new team. This was done, with a fast team resulting, but handicapped by inexperience. About the time the team had begun to strike its pace, Snoderly took fever and had to quit the game. He was captain, and the only old member on the team. Just at this time Watkins, one of the best players on the team, was stricken with rheumatism and was off for a short time. This necessitated changes which weakened the team considerably.

But from this time the team took a brace. Watkins returned; Morgan, one of last year's crack forwards, entered school and was elected temporary captain. He went right to work at his new duties, and discharged them so admirably that a good, fast team soon resulted. Before the season was over the boys were passing the ball like professionals.

We won the Normal School Championship of West Virginia by easily defeating Shepherdstown and taking Glenville over at the tune of 15-14.

With such good men as Ice, Kennedy, Colebank, Arnette, and Laulis left over for next year, it looks as though we would again have a team in the race for the State Championship.

INDIVIDUAL

Grady, better known as "Spider," is one of the gamest little forwards that ever represented our school. "Spider" can always be relied upon when a basket is needed, and can readily fill the position of coach, referee, or player.

Paul got his experience handling the bag of air in the class league. He was a star there, and showed up to no less advantage when he came into faster company. The man that gets a basket when Paul is guarding him earns it.

This was Frank's initial year on the first squad, but that made no difference. It has been said by some who knew, that he knows as much basketball as any man on the team. His greatest handicap is his small physique, but he helps to overcome this by speed.

"Cole" is a graduate of our class league. During the past season he has played a good game at forward. His playing is always marked by strength and fairness. As he is only a Junior, we predict a wonderful season for him next year.

Frank is peculiarly suited for center so far as physical makeup is concerned. He is tall, slim, and a good jumper. With a little more experience, he will make some one go up in the air next year if they get to touch the ball.

This burly youngster is noted for his roughness, but he generally gets his man just the same. Powell got his early training at W. V. U., where they generally do things right. However, we think they will see some improvement in his playing when he goes back there next year.

"Tom" subbed most of the season, but that signifies nothing. He is a very fast man, and no doubt, with what he saw and learned from the side lines this year, he will be heard from next year. He gave entire satisfaction in the games in which he played.

Ivanhoe is fast and a good passer, but has not had very much experience. The knowledge he has gained this year will put him on regular next year. He will manage the team the coming season.

Class League

THE goal for which the teams in the class league are striving is a handsome cup given by Mr. Glenn Toothman, of the Class of '11. This cup has been the cause of many good men being developed for the first team, because there have been men of great ability tried out in the class games that would never have been brought out otherwise. Besides this, it has created a spirit of loyalty and pride in the different classes.

"All things that are worth while are difficult to obtain." This cup is no exception to that well-known truth. In order to get it, the same class must win the championship of the league for two years in succession. This makes it hard to obtain, because the team that wins it one year must usually have its best players chosen on the varsity the following year, thereby weakening the class team for its second attempt.

The class of '13 was champion last year, but by reason of the loss of three players who went on the first team, it lost its hold on the cup to the strong class of '14. This year's winning team played exceptionally strong games and deserve the honors which they received.

Girl's Basketball

THE girls' team started the season with three of last year's players, Van Horn, Tuttle, and Barr, back in their old positions. These, with the addition of Groves from the class league and Hall from Washington Seminary, constituted a strong lineup from the beginning. However, toward the end of the season the team was crippled by the loss of the captain, Van Horn, who had to leave school for a short time.

Manager Conaway experienced trouble in scheduling games on account of the scarcity of teams in this section of the state. But this lack of regularly scheduled games was made up by substituting games with the second team. The second team, composed of Misses Conaway, Harper, Allen, Phillips, Duncan, and Heston, made a combination that almost had the first bunch guessing.

The two teams were coached by Snoderly and Morgan.

Baseball

UNDER the direction of Coach Daily, a graduate of Bethany College, the candidates for the varsity are preparing themselves for what promises to be one of the Normal's most successful seasons. Several of last year's players are back. Practically the entire infield of last year—Bock, Davis, Morgan and Snoderly—are back, while Arnett and Colebank are in their old positions in the outer garden. However, some of the old infielders may have to speed up a little in order to hold their positions, for two or three fast men are desiring “jobs” there also.

There are quite a few men out for the other outfield positions, but we cannot predict who will be the lucky ones.

It seems evident that we will have as good a battery as has represented the school in years. Talkington, last year's twirler; Hood, from the local High School, and Hull, a former Glenville player, are quite capable of attending to the delivering; while either Talkington or Watkins will probably receive unless some other catcher develops.

Manager Hildreth has arranged a good schedule, and a very successful season is insured.

Track Team

AT this time of the season it is hard to tell what kind of a track team will represent the school, but from all indications it will be a fast one. Several of the best men of last year's team are not back, but their places will be ably filled by the new material that has come into the school since then.

We are going to take part in the big State meet, to be held at Clarksburg, May 30, and we are going to take part in a manner that will make some of our opponents sit up and take notice as well as get up and stretch their muscles.

The team is under the proficient management of Harold F. Rogers.

What I Seed in Chapul at the Normal Skule at Fairmont

WUN da' this spring I wint to fairmont to see Jon. Jon ye no he's my son Jon is an he's a goin' tew th Fairmont State Normal Skule. Well I stade all nite wi' him an next da' he sez tew me, "Paw yew must cum over tew chapel tew da an hear Mr. Woodlie speak." Well I wint an what dew yew spose I seed. Whin I reched the dore an looked in Lor' I never seed sich a site in my born da's. Thar wuz a grate big rume full uv seats an the flore wuznt level either. At the lowen end uv the flore that wuz a lot uv peple run t'gether jist like a pile uv apples thet had rolled inter the fence corner.

Thar wuz a lot uv seats thet didn't hev no peple in em. In front uv all these peple thar wuz a sort uv platform and thar wuz several persons on it. Tha wuz older lookin' than thim in the pile. We wint in un set down un fust thing I node a feller with real black hare un short neck got up un sez 17a please. Thin a wuman commenced to hit some little white things set in a row on the edge uv a box on legs and the queres noise cum out uv thet box thet I hed ever herd, an thin all the peple in the pile commenced tew sing as loud as tha cud. Whin the singin' wuz dun a little man with no hare on top uv his hed got up un sed, "We will now say the 23 sam an thin say the Lords prayer." Whin tha got thru all thet the man with the black hare got up un sed, "66 please," an the woman commenced tew hit thim things on the box an every body started tew sing agin. Whin tha hed sung a few words the man stretched out his hans an every body stopped an he sed, "Yew ar off uv the key, les commence agin." Well I didn't see eny key so I wundered whur the pesky thing wuz. Whin tha hed got thru singin' this time a big man with mustache an curly hare got up an made a speech. It wuz about goin' tew skule an gittin' an edification an bein' gud an not runnin' thru the halls an hollerin' whin classes ar a goin' on an whin he done he shook his hed an everybody made a rush fer the dore to see who cud git out the quickest. Well it warn't more'n tew minits til yew cudn't see enybody no place.

Thets the fust time I node tha called thet chapul. I thot chapul wuz a house whur tha held meetin'.

Yewr ole fren,

After Ten Years

IN the year 1923 I was seated in a trolley car going to Fairmont. There were no friends of mine on the car, so I was sitting alone, thinking of my schooldays. I was going over to see my brother, who was to graduate from the Normal, and also to attend a reunion given by our class.

In the ten years since I had graduated my little red-headed, frank-faced brother had grown into a big boy, enthusiastic over football, but still red-headed and frank-faced.

After four years in college I had gone West and was living what I once thought would be an ideal life, but I was home now, and thought of remaining in West Virginia. As we drew near Fairmont, I became anxious to see again the town where I had spent my happiest days. A few miles from town, when the car stopped, a woman got on and took a seat near me. Her face seemed familiar to me, but I could not recognize her. We began to talk, and I found that she, too, was going in for commencement. All at once I caught a familiar expression on her face and exclaimed, "You are Mary McQueen."

She started, looked at me, and smiled, "You are Jack."

Then we talked about our old class and schooldays, but always avoiding the last night on commencement, as that was the time we had quarreled. We had planned to spend the evening together, but had disagreed over some slight thing, and she had declared that she would never go with me again. I had cared a great deal, but was stubborn, and had gone to college shortly after this and had never heard a word from her since, although my thoughts were often with her. Now my interest was awakened, and the man was not so stubborn as the boy had been. As the car drew in, I saw a crowd at the station. Friends greeted Mary, and I whispered, "I will see you tonight."

She blushed and said, "Of course, at the class meet."

I wondered if that blush was on my account. Was her look sad, or did I only fancy that? I had really grown tired of my bachelor freedom, and longed for a home instead of a boarding house.

My brother greeted me merrily, and we took a car for his club, which was out near the new school building. Before dinner we walked over to the campus. The building was a large one of stone and was surrounded by a campus of eight acres, enclosed by a hedge fence. In one corner was a girls' dormitory, and the large porch was, as of old, crowded with laughing girls. It was a much better building than the old one on Fairmont avenue, but I must confess that the latter was dearer to me.

Never since my college days had I dressed so carefully as I did that night, and of course there was only one face in my mind. Bobby was also very particular. I asked him where he was going.

"O, we have a senior reception tonight."

"Are you taking a friend?" I asked.

"Sure," was his brief reply.

I could not help smiling as I said, "Don't quarrel with her." He laughed as he answered, "We never do."

There were only twenty-five of our class present; letters were read from the absent ones; we had speeches from ones present and resolutions for ones who had passed away. At last we separated for a social chat before dinner was served. I made my way round to Mary and began talking to her. There was a picture in the hall that I wanted to ask her about, so we found ourselves apart from the crowd. I told her briefly how my life since 1913 had been spent, and finally how lonely I was, and asked her if she had really ever cared for me.

She started and said, "Is it possible you don't know?"

"Know what?" I asked.

"That I have been married four years."

I tried to laugh and said, "I never thought of such a thing. Tell me about it."

We rejoined the crowd and the evening passed away. But amid all the gayety and mirth there was a feeling of mortification and sadness in my heart. I returned home and found my brother sitting by the fire, looking very angry.

"Why, Bobby, what's the matter?"

"Nothing."

"Well, cheer up," I said, giving him a slap on the shoulder.

He glanced up and in his frank way said, "She is the contrariest girl I ever saw."

"Whew! I thought you never quarreled?" I questioned.

"I didn't. I was only fifteen minutes late and she went with some one else. Now she won't accept an apology and says she will never go any place with me again. Of course it was rather important that we be on time, and I stopped to talk 'ball' a little too long."

"Bobby, what kind of a girl is she?" I asked.

"Oh, the finest in the world." Then he added rather slowly, "When she isn't mad."

Then he told me about her and I gathered from this what a good influence she was having on his life and how much her friendship meant to him. I also learned that he was rather careless in being late in keeping a date and that she was a little high-tempered.

"This will not do, Bobby," I said. "Let me tell you a story," and I repeated my story to him. At the end he looked at me and said, "If you had it to do over again, what would you do?"

"I would write a note in the morning asking to call. Take her some flowers or candy, and apologize; and I am sure after she has slept over the matter her anger will have cooled, if she is a worth while girl."

Bobby was soon in the land of dreams. But as I sat before the fire, although my mind was at rest about Bob, I could only think of my last schooldays, and ask myself the question, "Is Mary happy?" and wonder whether, if I had not been so stubborn and if I had done as I advised my brother, my life and Mary's might not have been different.

The Writing On the Wall

WE were gathered around the great wood fire in the library. The children had been sent to bed, but not before each of us had been coaxed to contribute "just one little story about ghosts, you know, please!" with the last word drawn out so appealingly that we relented, each of us. We had been quiet now some minutes, when Jack turned to me and said, "Bet, didn't you rather figure in the limelight a year ago when some murder case was going on back in Iowa? What sort of a crazy reason was it you gave for knowing so much about it? Telling these ghost stories reminded me of it."

I laughed and shrugged my shoulders, partly to hide a shudder; but since I could not have chosen a better time, plan, or mood for the relating of my adventure—it was nearly midnight, and the room was lighted only by the fire, which seemed to seek out our faces to illumine, leaving the rest almost in darkness—I rather unwillingly began.

"I scarcely expect you to believe it. It seems almost like a dream to me now. Perhaps it was; I don't know. However, to begin: Some of you probably don't remember the details of the case. A man had disappeared, suddenly and unaccountably. Also a maniac had escaped from an asylum a few days before. The town was small, and the only explanation was to link the disappearance of the two together in some way. Besides, the lunatic was a very fiend, several people, when he had escaped before, having been rescued just in time, from various tortures which originate in the brain of a demon. All this impressed me a great deal from the very first.

"Now as to where I come in. A party of us motored to Baizil, which, you know, is a fair-sized town about eighteen miles from our little village, to attend a concert, and we were to drive home by moonlight.

"In some mysterious way, something had gotten away with the machine, just as we were about to start home. The place where we had left it was a large shed built for that purpose just back of the theater. By the time the car was ready everybody else had gone except the janitor and another man that had been standing some distance away, apparently engaged in the study of the perspiring chauffeur. We were seated in the machine before the man moved. Then he glided quickly across the floor and in a second we were in darkness save for the moonlight through the opening between the large folding doors of the exit. Then this light began gradually to diminish, and a cold chill ran over me as I realized that in another minute we would be locked in that big, deserted room—for the janitor had just stepped outside to bring in some billboards—and in absolute darkness. The idea suddenly flashed through my mind—why it should come to me, I don't know—that we had been trapped by that terrible maniac and that he would find some way of working on us his fiendish tortures. There was only one man in the party besides the chauffeur, and neither was, of course, armed. It has often been proved that the insane have the strength and cunning of three or four ordinary men. All this I thought of before the doors were more than starting to close, and just then in the wall to my right a sort of shimmering silver square appeared. And as I looked a large pen traced these words upon it in black, 'For God's sake, come'—then it seemed to be melting away, then brighter again,—'the cellar of the old barn.'

There was no doubt in my mind but that the man who had disappeared was by his will power making me see that message and was giving me warning that we were in danger, else why should it appear to me, who had not known him or even seen him, to my knowledge?

I shrieked loudly, "Quick: go!" With a jerk we started and the doors scraped the fenders as we went thorough.

"They all turned to me in consternation as I kept insisting that we drive immediately to the solitary old barn which I remembered stood in the middle of a wheat field about half way between the two towns. But, I think more to quiet my wild pleading than anything else, they agreed to get a couple of policemen and search the place.

"The rest you probably remember. We found the man almost dead with both legs and arms broken and his tongue black with thirst, while about a yard away stood a full pail of water.

"We were some time in preparing the man to be carried to the machine, and as we got to the top of the stairs we encountered the fiend. The policemen tried to take him alive, but he escaped them and they shot him as he was running across the road.

"Ah—I thank you very much, ladies and gentlemen, for your kind and minute attention, and I think, if my sister doesn't object, I would suggest that we might appreciate a few lights, and perhaps a little lunch to divert our minds."

To See Ourselves

“WOMAN’S suffrage, pough!” said the man comfortably, dismissing the subject with a languidly disdainful little gesture.

His wife, who was accustomed to accept his opinions docilely, having learned long ago that they could not be altered, was silenced, but she retained her own opinion, nevertheless, and, unlike her usual self, remained silent for about ten minutes. The man looked up.

“You were at the club this afternoon?” he inquired lazily.

“Yes; Mrs. B—— lectured on ‘The Suffrage Question in England.’”

The man smiled tolerantly.

“Woman’s place is in the home,” he said, almost unconsciously, and seemed to consider the matter settled.

“By the way,” said he, roused by some sudden thought, “have you heard about the Crossmans?”

“Why, no,” she answered with puzzled surprise.

“I guess it’s been going on for some time, but they have succeeded in keeping everything pretty quiet. It seems that Fred Crossman has been spending more time at the office with his pretty little stenographer than is really necessary for his business, and his mother-in-law is raising rather a merry little rumpus about it. I can’t say that I blame him much myself—although his wife seems so fat and stupid.” (He looked complacently at the neat little figure of his wife.) “About all she knows is how to coax the servants to stay and how much it takes to make baby a dress. She never goes out of the house and is interested in nothing that he is interested in. Well,” (with a groan) “I guess we had better be turnin’ in, hadn’t we?”

The little woman’s eyes had kindled, and she drew in her breath to speak, but changing her mind, she only smiled whimsically and murmured as she rose and put away the crocheting, “Woman’s place is in the home.”

A True Story

THE little girl, mounted on a gray horse, rode slowly along the dusty road, with the hot afternoon sun beating down upon her. As she rode she rehearsed the speech her uncle told her to make, but when she at last stood at the door of the big, prosperous looking farmhouse in the middle of the rolling, green fields, her heart beat suffocatingly and her mind was a blank. A stooped, wrinkled, old lady, with a bustling air of business, answered her knock.

"How are you, honey? Come right in. How's your ma?"

"She's very well, thank you, ma'am."

A short pause followed. Then the old woman asked:

"Did your ma want to borrow something?"

"No'm, but Uncle John, he sent me. He said to tell you he was too busy and he couldn't come himself, but it was about time they were getting up the preacher's salary, and he'd be awful glad if you could pay something this year," she ended in choking haste.

"O my soul," cried the little old woman, "if 'taint one thing it's another. I do declare, everybody seems to be trying to bleed me. Do they think I am made of money?" she demanded.

"Deed I don't know, ma'am."

"Yes," the old woman went on with her tale of woe, "I'm plumb discouraged. Now, only this morning Luzadders sent Jim over to tell me that a hundred and fifty of my sheep had been over there and I would have to pay for the grass they et, and here's acres of my grass knee-high, and nobody rentin' grass of me. I lost three of my nicest steers, too, last week. They must have got paint up at the new barn. I'm only goin' to have about three hundred and eighty head of cattle to go this fall, and I sold fifteen of my best haystacks last week and got $25.00 less for them than I expected, and my wheat didn't turn out well—less than a thousand bushel—and then my corn—but, O, what's the use? Sometimes it seems to me that everything was going headlong to the dogs."

"Yes'm," quavered the child, "but he said the preacher was awful hard up."

"Yes, and so am I hard up; my taxes was nearly double what they was last year." She thought a little. "How much did he want?"

"I don't just know, but Uncle said he hoped you would remember the Lord loves a cheerful giver, and I think he'd like for you to pay a right smart."

"I ain't a payin', I'm givin'," snarled the old woman, and reaching down into a deep pocket in the side of her dress, she pulled out a long, old pocketbook, and after having removed a thick roll of bills, she got out seventy-five cents and gave it to the little girl, with this admonition:

"Now, hurry on home and don't lose that money. Money, my child, is hard to come at. It aint to be found in every pig's track and hangin' along the road on sassafras bushes. I hope it'll do the preacher good, for mercy knows I need it myself. Money is hard to come at."

The child carried home what seemed in her inexperienced mind, a princely sum, much pleased that she had gotten money when homefolks had declared that none was to be procured. Her uncle took the three quarters in his hand, jingled them, whistled thoughtfully and then, rolling his eyes upward with a comical assumption of piety, he ejaculated, "Thank heaven for the widow's mite."

The Old Sycamore

TO THE CLASS OF '13

FAMOUS not as some trees are,
Nor giving to historic lore;
To us you are a familiar friend
Upon your mound near the river's shore.
As we think of our Alma Mater
And of school days that are o'er,
We shall recall those happy hours
Spent 'neath the Sycamore.

Old friend upon the mound,
May no harm to you befall,
From here beheld the scenes of life
From Nature's wilds to city hall.
O might you have the power of speech
To tell what could be heard!
All would the story like to hear,
Some could recall it, word for word.

In years to come, old tree,
Your silvery boughs may look the same,
Whene'er we think of school days
We'll link with them your name.
In the evening time of life,
When days of toil are o'er,
May we all meet once again
Beneath the Sycamore.

Editorial Comment

WE know of no school anywhere with prospects so bright as the Fairmont Normal.

For years past it has been ranking up with the leading schools of the state. This has been done under the handicap of insufficient buildings, equipment and funds with which to secure the proper number of teachers.

This era of hardships is drawing to a close. Marked changes have taken place within the past year. The faculty has been increased by four new members; courses have been lengthened and made more thorough; new laboratory apparatus has been secured, and the general standard throughout has been raised to a much higher plane.

To show what faith people all over the state have in the future of the school, the legislature in its last session passed a bill appropriating forty thousand dollars and authorizing the sale of the present school property, the entire fund to be used in laying off a site and the erection of new buildings.

This work will be begun in the near future, and when it is completed, Fairmont Normal will be in a position to easily do the work that a first class Normal School should.

* * *

ONE of the most urgent needs of our school is more spirit. Why don't we have more of it? Why can't we show as much loyalty and enthusiasm as do others of half our position? Spirit makes the school what it is. But there are mistaken ideas as to what school spirit really means. It should be the desire to make your own school a leader in all things.

In some instances too much interest is taken in one department, at the expense of another. This should not be. Nor should any undue advantage be taken over any one in making your own good. But work hard. Go in for athletics, take part in the literary programs, let every one know what you are doing, and in a short time people will be sitting up and taking notice of the Fairmont State Normal School.

HALLOWE'EN RECEPTION

Rythmic Rattlings.

THERE was an old lady who lived at the Dorm,
With a house full of girls who oft made things warm.
So she gave them advice till they wished they were dead,
Then rang the bell sharply and sent them to bed.

Mr. Lively, one fine day,
Took his students out to spray
Some trees that on the campus grew.
Now the students wandered far away,
Till when he called the roll, they say,
He could not locate more than two.

This was such a serious thing,
They've now no hopes on which to cling,
That they will get a grade.
They know not what result 'twill bring,
But we're quite sure there'll be a string
Who'll wish that they had stayed.

"Is it really time to go home?"
"Yes; from the old Dorm you must roam,
For 'Gibbie' has come,
So now you must run,
And leave the poor girls all alone."

Aubrey, or in other words, "Jew,"
A member of our class, too,
Went strolling away
One beautiful day,
With the fair little girl he would woo.

Now listen and I will tell you
Of the dimple-faced girl called "Lou."
From Grafton she came,
And it's hard to name
All the boys she sings love songs to.

A tall, happy fellow named Leigh,
Does more mischief in one short day
Than you could e'er guess;
(Don't tell it to "Less"),
And all you can say is, "Nay, nay!"

This long, lanky athlete is Ice,
Whom we think you could easily entice
To go for a stroll
On some nice, little knoll,
For he really thinks girls are quite nice.

* * *

This little Dutch boy is a sinner,
And never, never can win 'er;
He goes to the Dorm,
But only for form,
And will always be a hard "Stinger."

* * *

Many times he has had warning,
Yea, even a hard, hard scorning;
So long he did vigil keep,
That he always went to sleep
At the 8:10 class in the morning.

* * *

Don't call this dear girl "Margie,"
Nor tell her that she is larg(y).
'Cause she will get mad,
Then you would feel bad,
Because you've offended our "Margie."

* * *

"Mickey" is the name of a lad
Who never gets blue, or is sad.
He's quite an athlete,
In fact, can't be beat.
And that's not all—there's much more to add.

SKATING

One afternoon, six Normal girls,
In caps and sweaters warm and nice,
Went out to do some fancy whirls
Upon Monongahela's ice.
They donned their skates, forgot their cares,
Their hearts were full of joy and bliss
As down the glistening, crystal sea

They	in	like
went	twos	this.

The north wind raged the live long day,
But the jolly girls made no complaint,
And it tinted the cheeks of the damsels gay
With Nature's own cosmetic paint.
With nymph-like grace they curve and glide
And ne'er a single stroke amiss,
As down the river side by side

They go	in twos	like this.
---------	---------	------------

The dull, grey clouds grow thick o'er head,
The fluttering snow falls thick and fast,
And homeward the revelling maidens sped,
Compelled to leave their sport at last.
'Twas growing late, they hurried on,
When one unlucky miss
Tripped up, and—crash! bing! bing!! the bunch
Were all mixed up like this!

DID YOU EVER HEAR?

Girls, girls! If you don't be quiet I'll report you to Mr. Woodley.

Come, Mandy; kiss me in the ear.

I'll be jiggered if I do.

I'm perfectly crazy about Tom. Don't you think he's grand looking?

Our highest joys of life come from a willing and ready obedience to just laws.

By heck—I— That is—that's right, old boy.

Now we're getting at it.

How much do you like me?

Isn't this too glorious for anything?

This is really a grand old hymn, and we can sing it well if the tenors and basses will quit pouting and work.

There will be a student teachers' meeting at 3:30 in room 6.

Now, if there's anything you don't understand, will you please ask me, and not the one behind you?

They've nothing on me—I'll tell the world that.

Where's Mickey? Did you say he went to town?
What did he go for? When's he comin' back? How long has he been gone? etc.

(Smack) What are you going to do about it? (Smack).

Oh, what is so rare as a day in June?

Why, a talk in the hall that doesn't end soon,

A chance to leave before it is noon,

A moonlight stroll without any moon,

A Freshie at the circus without a balloon,

A meal at the Dorm without a prune,

A trip up town with no chaperone,

A song in Chapel that's sung in tune,

Advice that amounts to a "picayune,"

A stroll on the campus without a spoon,

A new girl that isn't a "peacheroon,"

A man with ideas that isn't a "loon,"

A current event without a cartoon,

All these are rarer far, than a day in June.

If the river freezes over next winter, would Jessie B. Ice?

Mr. Higby (in history class): Who were the sons of the knights?

Loyd Tustin: Why, the stars, of course.

Freshmen in history: Miss Prichard, how did the Greeks keep from getting the gods all balled up?

Mr. Rogers: What causes hydrophobia?

Glenn Hall: Well, it's when one mad dog bites another and that dog bites another, and—

Mr. Rogers: Yes; but what I want to know is who bit the first dog.

Pearl Wilson: Oh, girls! We had finger-bowls for dinner at the Manley today.

Hazel Stone: And did you eat them all?

Ivanhoe Arnett (in English): Well, I don't remember just how it ended, but Bartley reformed and was a good man and so was his wife.

Miss Prichard: Carrie, why were you absent from school yesterday?

Carrie Barr: I was sick on account of illness.

Student: Do you have "Great Expectations?"

Miss Coplin: No; and you won't have either, after you have taught school as long as I have.

Beulah Ash: Girls, does it make your back sore to play basketball? Let me see the rule book.

Mr. Rogers: I'm in a great hurry; can you cut my hair without having me remove my collar?

Barber: Yes, sir; and you can leave your hat on, too.

Bertha Dilgard: I want to get a dress to wear around the Dormitory.

Clerk: How large is the Dormitory?

Mrs. Reed: Who has been walking on that polished floor with their feet?

Mary, Mary, quite contrary,
How does your English go?
With C's and D's and often E's,
Which cause the tears to flow.

Clint Tustin: I went to see my mother the other day.

Paul Watkins: And how did you find her?

Clint: Oh, I knew where she lived.

Coach: What is the hardest thing you encounter in playing basketball?

Ruth Philipps: At the present stage of the game the hardest thing I have encountered is the floor.

Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these: I've flunked again.

Pearl Wilson: Sh! Girls. You must not make so much noise. Ears have walls.

John Bock (as he came into the Normal): I will now sing you a little ditty entitled, "Who Put the Mouse in the Registry?"

Miss Coplin (in English): Mr. Tustin, from what is that taken?

C. C. Tustin: It is not taken from anything; that is all of it.

Mr. Martin (in chorus): When you sing to the bottom of page five, turn over.

Prof. Mercer (to a freshman who was standing by the radiator): Never mind the cold; I'll make it warm enough for you before class is over.

Al Stenger (discussing football): You know Watkins? He's going to be our best man before long.

Pearl Cork: Oh, Al! What a nice way to propose to me!"

Jessie Price: How kind of you, Fred, to bring me these lovely flowers. They are so beautiful and fresh. I think there is some dew on them yet.

Fred Bradley: Yes, there is; but I am going to pay it off tomorrow.

Loyd Tustin: I would like to get my hair cut.

Barber: Any special way?

Loyd: Yes; off.

Bob Richards: I have a good way to catch rabbits.

John Bock: What is it?

Bob: Crouch down behind a stone wall and make a noise like a turnip.

John: A better way than that would be for you to go and sit in a bed of cabbage heads and look natural.

Mr. Higby: Why were you late for school this morning?

Student: My watch was fifteen minutes slow. It has bothered me a great deal lately, but after this I shall put no more faith in it.

Mr. Higby: It's not faith you want in it. It's works.

Mr. Martin (to students who are trying a new song): You can breathe after Lord, but don't stop in the middle of heaven.

Mr. Woodley: I want to tell you that the secret of my success, as it must be of any man's, is hard work.

Frank Kennedy: I don't care to hear other people's secrets, and I am too much of a gentleman to take advantage of information gained in that way.

Mrs. Gibson: Don't you know it is against the rules to leave your room during study hours?

Edna Tierney: Oh, don't talk to me about rules. It's all I can do to keep the Ten Commandments.

If Jessie Price('s) Bradley will Al. Stenger.

If the river freezes over next winter, Wood(ley) Lee or Higb(y)e on the Ice?

Helen Allen (wearily): Oh, how I should like to lie on that couch.

Grace Van Horn: I think the worst thing you could say about that couch would be the truth.

Mr. Lively (in agriculture): How do we know the dogwood?

Dortha Knapp: By its bark.

Hugh Meridith: Have you ever seen that girl before?

Green Federer: Often.

Hugh: But have you ever noticed anything funny about her?

Green: Why, yes; come to think of it, I have seen you with her once or twice.

Mr. Higby: Of whom did the vassals ask permission to marry?

Frank Goff: They asked the lord.

Grace VanHorn: Girls, how I would like to become intellectual! What can I do to become intellectual?

Helen Allen: Ye must be born again.

Mr. Shaffer (in History of Ed.): When did we have the last test?

Lula Thomas: Just before the Renaissance.

Mr. Lively: When was this chicken killed?

Mrs. Reed: We don't furnish dates with chicken; only bread and butter.

Mr. Lively: Which do you think is the more valuable, a gas well or an oil well?

Elizabeth Conoway: I believe I would rather have a Colebank.

Bert Jackson (excitedly): Have the classes changed yet?

Frank Kennedy: Yes; they don't look a bit like they did yesterday.

Student: Mr. Higby, why didn't you stay for chorus this morning?

Mr. Higby: Because Mr. Martin said I didn't have absolute pitch.

Miss Coplin (in English X): Mr. Tustin, will you characterize Tom Corey for us?

L. T.: He-he-he; I-I-I; well, I know, but I can't tell it.

How would you like to see Bessie Berry and Bantan Cornwell do the "turkey trot"?

Dad Mercer started to write a new geometry a short time ago, but when he found that there was one theorem in this school that he could not solve he gave up in great despair.

The thorem was this: If Jessie Price is the center of a circle and Fred Bradley is the radius, what is the circumference?

Dad says that it cannot be solved by any one but a preacher.

Dorm Girl: Oh, Miss Wilcox, your hair is coming down.

Miss Wilcox (unthoughtedly): Goodness me: I can't afford to lose that; it is expensive.

Hon. Bernard L. Butcher

MR. BUTCHER, a son of Eli Baxter Butcher, was born September 12, 1853, near Huttonsville, Randolph County, West Virginia. He received his early education in the public schools and in the Huttonsville Academy. He attended the Fairmont State Normal School, from which he graduated in the Calss of 1874. While in the Normal he studied law under Judge Haymond and was admitted to the bar in Randolph County, 1875, and has been in active practice ever since. In 1875-'76, he became owner and editor of The Randolph Enterprise, along with V. B. Trimble.

He was elected prosecuting attorney of Randolph County in the fall of 1876, and served four years in that capacity. In 1877 he was appointed one of the members of the Board of Regents of State Normal Schools by Governor Henry M. Matthews. In 1880 he was elected State Superintendent of Free Schools and served as such for four years. While in office he did a great deal to uplift the educational standards of the state.

In 1886 he was appointed permanent secretary of the Business Men's Development Association of the state.

In 1892 he was elected one of the presidential electors, voting for Grover Cleveland for President. In 1893 he was one of the jurors in the Forestry Department of the World's Fair at Chicago. About this time he removed to Fairmont, where he has since resided, and engaged in the practice of law.

He was one of the directors of the public library for many years; trustee of Davis-Elkins College; and for ten years member of the Board of Regents of the State Colored Institute near Charleston.

In 1901 he was appointed referee of bankruptcy by the late Judge John J. Jackson, and has been appointed several times since by Judge Alton G. Dayton.

He was active in the organization of the Marion County Law Library and the Marion County Historical Society. He was a member of the State Historical Society for a long time. He has been for many years a member of the Presbyterian Church; a member of the Masonic fraternity, and a director of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Hon. Thomas C. Miller

PROFESSOR THOMAS CONDIT MILLER, son of William Edmund Miller, was born in Fairmont, West Virginia, July 19, 1848. He received his early education in private schools and had as an instructor Dr. Wm. R. White.

He attended the Fairmont Academy and High School, and when the State Normal School was opened he was enrolled as a student and completed the course under Principal J. G. Blair. He afterwards spent a year in Adrian College, Michigan, but on account of ill health gave up his college course in his Junior year. He has since continued in school work. For a period of twenty-one consecutive years he was principal of the Fairmont High School. He resigned this position in 1893 to accept a position as principal of the preparatory department of the West Virginia University, and later was appointed professor of pedagogy in the University. He served in this position for eight years. He was elected State Superintendent of Free Schools in 1900 and served in this capacity from 1901 to 1909. Since 1909 Professor Miller has been principal of Shepherds College Normal School, at Shepherdstown, West Virginia. He is a member of Meade Post No. 6, Grand Army of the Republic. He was a member of Lincoln Lodge, Good Templars, and has always been active in the temperance movement. He is a member of the National Education Association and one of its National Council; a member of the American Historic Association, and of the National Geograph Society.

J. Walter Barnes

MR. BARNES is an alumnus of the Normal, graduating in the Class of 1879. At the age of twenty-one he was admitted to the bar, having taken the law course at the University of Virginia, under Dr. Minor. In the spring of 1885 he began teaching in the Normal, having taught several schools in Marion and other counties. His success was so marked that he was made principal of the school in 1892, and for ten years he labored early and late for its success. While principal, the question of moving the school to the present location came up, and Mr. Barnes was the real power that made possible the results—under adverse conditions, which he was able to turn into stepping stones to success—by his energetic, intelligent and untiring efforts before the legislature and other authorities of that time. It can be safely said that no one has done more for the Normal School than Mr. Barnes. He has always been a loyal friend of the institution, and is ready to work for its best interests at all times.

The same energy and effort which brought him success as an educator, has made him successful in business as general manager of the Consolidated Telephone Company of West Virginia. As a citizen, as a business man, and as an educator, he merits and possesses the respect of all who know him.

The Mound on the Campus and the splendid Sycamore tree that it sustains and protects, are due to his thoughtful foresight, when others would have removed both.

Ulysses S. Fleming

ULYSSES S. FLEMING, a former principal of the Fairmont State Normal School, was reared near Fairmont, on a farm. He attended the common schools of the county and engaged in teaching. He entered the Fairmont State Normal School, from which institution he was graduated in 1875. Later he attended Duff's Business College at Pittsburgh, and Adrian College, at Adrian, Michigan. He engaged in teaching at Beverly, where he inspired a large number of young men and women, who have since become prominent in church and school work. He was employed as teacher for the spring term of the Fairmont State Normal School in 1877, where he taught bookkeeping, penmanship and English. He taught a summer school at Kingwood, where he likewise interested a very large number of young people, who have taken a prominent part in the affairs of state and education, among them being J. R. Trotter, former State Superintendent of Free Schools, and Frank Trotter, Professor of Latin at the West Virginia University. He continued teaching in the Fairmont State Normal until 1885, serving as acting principal during the year of 1883-4. He then became Superintendent of the Grafton Public Schools, and continued in this capacity until he resigned to engage in the editing of a church paper in Pittsburgh. Tiring of this, he returned to his native state and to educational work. He was made Principal of the Buckhannon Academy, at Buckhannon, where he was highly esteemed and did successful work. He was chosen Superintendent of the Parkersburg Public Schools and continued in service there until the year 1903, when he was elected Principal of the Fairmont State Normal School, and continued as such until ill health compelled him to resign in 1907.

While Professor Fleming served other towns and cities as well, as principal and superintendent, his heart was always warm for the Fairmont School from the time of his first association with it until his death. He loved the school, to which he gave much of his valuable time and unrestrained devotion; he was unfailing in his loyalty to its traditions and his desire for its success. His influence here and elsewhere as a teacher made for character and intellectual development, as all who have sat at his feet will bear united testimony. His school work, covering so many different points in the state, his institute work in the different counties, his labors as member of the State Board of Examiners brought him in contact with a very large number of teachers. He realized his responsibility as a teacher and measured up to the full measure thereof in the highest sense.

Horace Mann said, "Be ashamed to die until you have accomplished some victory for humanity." Surely here is one who did much for humanity, and whose influence will live long in the hearts and lives of the people with whom he came in contact.
